Hi Stephanie, here is the document I spoke of. As I said, EPA decided, during the development of the 2003 CAFO Rule not to address air emissions, including ammonia, pursuant to the CWA. In this regard, EPA stated that "EPA considered whether CAFO air pollutant emissions should be regulated under the CWA. However, EPA determined that the CAA has the authority necessary to control such emissions and they are most appropriately addressed by this statute." (See "Appendix A: Essay Section of Response to Comment Document", pages A-4 through A-6, for the 2003 CAFO Final Rule, attached in entirety.)

Please contact me if EPA can be of further assistance.
